THE PROPOSED NEW RESERVOIR. The Reason a Higher Reservoir Ought to Be

To the Editor of the Intelligences Siz:-I have been reading a threeornered discussion in the Register coneerning the new reservoir that is to be built this year. The man who comnences the discussion asks for informs be perfectly safe for the pipes as they now exist, and that the water can be pumped into it with the present pumping power without requiring any new machinery. Then when the population climbs higher, if such a thing ever happens, the anxiliary system mentioned by the opponent of the new system, can be introduced with comparatively little expense. The necessity for bailding on the hill sides cannot be denied, for what few lots are left unoccupied on the low lands are so expensive that they cannot be purchased by workingmen, and that is the class of men we want here, as we have essentially a manufacturing city and want a thousand workingmen rather than one capitalist.

It may be said there is plenty of room on the Island for men to build new houses. But the Island is better suited for people who have plenty of money and want large grounds with handsome gardens; and who, if they happen to be washed out by a flood, have the means to refurnish their houses and beautify their grounds. So far as the expense of the new system is concerned, the gentlemen of the Water Board have carefully corning the new reservoir that is to be built this year. The man who commences the discussion saks for information, as to the reasons for going into such a large expenditure of the city's money; and in a subsequent communication complains that the information is not forthcoming. Under the impression that an anonymous discussion in the papers does not always result in good because the parties feel at liberty to abuse one another and the valuable space of the public prints is taken up without making the public any wiser, I have thought it best to give my ideas to the public over my own signature. In presume no one will pretend to say I have any private end in view, being neither a contractor nor a stone mason, nor owning any property above the reach of the opresent water system. Every honorable and fair-minded citizen coastults the general welfare of the city see whole and not only of theorem of the city see where he does not much probably lives where he does not need a high water service, asks a few questions, and subsequently complains that his questions are not answered. He desires to know, what are the dedicingers to know, what are the dedicing that the common mentioned states are acquested in the propent of the city will be mighlanders if they must have to expect the city to go to a great expense to supply them with water, when they knew at the time they built that no water was to be had there? Again, could we not keep our present reservoir and make some auxiliating and the present reservoir and make some auxiliation of the committee of the Judiciary to the highlanders if they must have a company who then owned the state of the common mentioned ($50,000) do the work, or will it not be found that a much larger sum will be required? Again, could we not keep our present reservoir and make some auxiliating the propose of the new formation and the committee of the Judician and the present reserv President Cleveland has nominated Commissioner of the General Land Office.
